How to make a super-saturated solution

- A super-saturated solution is a solution containing more solute than it can normally hold at a given temperature
- A supersaturated solution can be made by heating a saturated solution
- When heated, the particles spread apart, allowing the solution to hold more solute, and it becomes unsaturated
- If more solute is added, when the solution cools, it will contain more solute than it would normally hold at the cooler temperature
- It is now a super-saturated solution
- This process is how crystals are formed
